Tamar Trails Information

Devon Great Consols Mineral Railway Trail
(multiuse, length 6.5 km. Approximate time to walk 3 hours)
Journey through this working conifer woodland along parts of the old mineral railway that once linked Devon Great Consol mines with the port of Morwellham. Pass by some of the picnic sites, popular in Victorian times, with dramatic views over the Tamar Valley. The trail is a wide path with a compacted stone surface occasionally muddy after wet weather. The trail is level in parts with some steep sections, which may be challenging.

Wheal Josiah Trail
(footpath only, length 3.5 km. Approximate time to walk 1 1/4 hours)
Explore mining landscapes on this wide, mainly level path, with moderate inclines in parts. The path has a compacted stone surface offering a less steep walking route to view mining works and to join the Wheal Maria Trail.

Wheal Maria Trail
(multiuse, length 5 km. Approximate time to walk 2 hours)
This wide trail passes through mixed woodland, opening into spectacular views across the Tamar Valley and mining remains. The trail is a compacted surface of mud and stones, with some loose stones in parts. It is generally level with steep, challenging sections in parts. It is recommended to complete this circuit in a clockwise direction.

Chimney Rock Walk
(footpath only, length 2 km. Approximate time to walk 1 hour)
Explore beech, oak and conifer woodland, with sweeping views over the steep sides of the River Tamar. This is a narrow footpath, steep in places, passing near to a vertical drop. It can be muddy after wet weather and includes short sections of rocky, uneven ground.
